

What is Bibo about?

This information has come of the Literacy Shed website:

Bibo, 'It is not just a machine...He is different'
Bibo is a robot, he has a warranty for 10,000 years.

Bibo wheels his ice-cream trailer to his corner each day. He watches the clock, no one comes, day after day, after day. We have little clues that not everything is how it seems. Where is everybody? We don't see any customers and Bibo seems to be remembering back to his past, echoing with the sounds of children's laughter.

The opening of the film lets us see Bibo in his environment. There are clues to his past in his picture frames on the walls and the commentary running in the background. One day Bibo has a vivid flashback, a hallucination. He goes home and he creates a friend for himself. We do not know what he is going to do with his new automaton or who she is but again the film makers give us clues. Bibo has created this whole world in order to recreate the good times in his life.
