

Where They Live

Bees are the most important insects in the world for humans. Not only do they make tasty honey but they are also responsible for pollinating plants that produce fruit and vegetables. Without bees we would not be able to produce a lot of the food the world needs to survive.

The honeybee has three different body sections: the head, thorax and abdomen. The bee's wings and legs are attached to its thorax. It has two compound eyes and antennae on its head.
